

POPE INVOKES DIVINE FAVOR ON INSURGENTS

Formally Bestows Apostolic Benediction on Generalissimo Franco

NEW DIPLOMACY NOTE

First Time Pontiff Has Openly
Sanctioned Franco's
Cause

VATICAN CITY, Apr. 18.—(INS)—
Pope Pius XI today formally bestowed the apostolic benediction on Generalissimo Franco and invoked "divine favor" for the insurgent cause in Spain.

It was the first time the Pontiff had openly sanctioned Franco's cause, and struck a new note in the diplomacy of the Holy See.

Meanwhile, the condition of the 81
year old Pope, who collapsed from fatigue during the long Easter services in St. Peter's, today was reported as satisfactory. His physician examined him frequently, but no visitors were permitted in the Papal apartments.

VATICAN CITY, Apr. 18.—(INS)—
The health of 81-year-old Pope Pius was again a cause of anxiety today after his collapse during the long Easter services in St. Peter's.

Exhausted by the three-hour ceremony for canonization of three new saints, the Pontiff was forced to retire to a hospital room in the Vatican for 40 minutes.

But the Pope rallied dramatically and made his scheduled appearance on the balcony, where he blessed the multitude of 300,000 below, and all the world.

The Pope appeared older, thinner,
and far weaker than he did a year ago
at the same ceremony. At the canonization he was too weak to utter the usual Hymn.

Emotion moved the throng when the Pope made his appearance, and many shouted: "Courage, Holy Father!"

In canonizing the Saints, the Pope prayed to Andrew Bobola, the Polish martyr, to preserve Poland against Communism; to Salvador Da Horta of Spain for peace in Spain; and to Giovanni Leonardo of Italy to intervene for spreading of the Gospel in all lands.

and bruises of the head and hands last

One Workman Dies; Dozen Others Injured

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 18.—(INS)—
One workman died and more than a dozen other persons, including several firemen, were suffering from painful injuries and burns today as an aftermath of a three-alarm fire at the Barrett Company plant in the Frankford section.

The dead is Gerald Deegan, 26, a stoker, who was burned so seriously that he died shortly after the explosion.

Hundreds of residents of the neighborhood fled to the street as three tanks containing nearly 600,000 gallons of crude oil exploded, sending a pillar of flame into the sky.
Burning oil flowed into nearby Frankford creek, but firemen extinguished
the floating fire before it reached Frankford Arsenal, where tons of explosives are stored.

Most of the Easter Sunday skeleton force escaped by diving into the creek when the first tank exploded with a detonation heard for miles around.

ROME, April 16.—(INS)—Unprecedented police precautions are being about one week, visiting Florence, Rome and Naples with a brief visit to Capri, mecca of all Germans and at present the idyllic island of former Ger-

Widespread Search Made For Andrew C. Whitfield

NEW YORK, Apr. 18.—(INS)—A wide search by air and auto was instituted today for Andrew Carnegie Whitfield, nephew of Mrs. Andrew Carnegie Whitfield and the late financier. The 28 year old aviation enthusiast disappeared last Friday while making a short flight from Roosevelt Field to Brentwood, L. I., in his small striped monoplane.

Whitfield took off with only ten gallons of gas and there was a strong wind toward the sea at the time. It was considered possible that he was blown to sea and forced down but this was not considered probable as Whitfield was an experienced pilot.

A number of planes combed the region near Roosevelt Field today but no trace of his ship was found.

Inspector Harold R. King of Nassau County was one of those taking part in the search. Although an alarm has been sent out to Nassau County police no general alarm has been issued.

Whitfield's disappearance was first discovered when his brother J. H.
Whitfield checked at Roosevelt Field to see if Whitfield had returned. Told that he had not a general search by Long Island fliers was asked for. Whitfield is known as a "good pilot" and had had more than 200 hours of solo flying.

He was married to the former Elizabeth Haley a year ago and their domestic life was said to be happy.

effective.

Pennsylvania fliers will cut 25 minutes on the Western run, the carrier announced today. Spokesmen for the B. & O. said Western expresses will clip more than half-an-hour from their present running time.

Here's one for the book!

Seventy-five miles an hour on a motorcycle, while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, with a lady-friend on the tandem seat! Can you beat it?

That is what Private Shovelin, of the Doylestown sub-station of Pennsylvania Motor Police charged against Leonard Horan, 31, of Shenandoah, when Horan was arrested for drunken driving on the Bethlehem pike near Sellersville.

Miss Eleanor Stackhouse, 19, of Shenandoah, refused to leave her friend, so she, too, was committed to the Bucks County Prison, with Horan
and charged with disorderly conduct.

Horan was examined by a Sellers-ville physician and pronounced "under the influence of liquor." Private Shovelin said that he chased the motorcycle for some distance and had

WEEKLY NEWSPAPER IS PUBLISHED BY PUPILS

Third Grade at Bath St. School
Includes News, Poems, Drawings

THE EDITORS CHANGE

A weekly "newspaper," probably not heard of by many Bristolians, nevertheless has a circulation among thirty-some families here, and what is more has approximately 30 "reporters."

This publication is known as "The Third Grade News," and is "printed" weekly on a duplicating machine, with the students of the third grade, in charge of Miss Maude Connor, reporting the news, writing the stories, contributing poems, etc., painting the cover, stapling the pages, and caring for the distribution.

This is the second term for the project, although the paper took more definite form with the opening of school last September. The students selected the name "The Third Grade News," and work on all phases of the project correlates their English, spelling, art and reading. For after the paper is published the class reads the news together under direction of Miss Connor, so the girls and boys will be better able to read the stories to their parents when they reach home with a copy.

A new editor is chosen each week,
thus giving all students an opportunity to fill this position. A contribution box is placed on a table in the class room, and into this the third grade
students are privileged to drop news items, and each must be signed. The editor culls over these, eliminates duplications, and gets the remaining items in shape for publication. There are two art editors, one making a free-hand drawing for the cover, these being in colors. Another art editor cares for drawings for the picture page.
These are reproduced by the teacher
for the stencils, she tracing the drawings.

The news is written by the editor
from the many contributions received, this being done in pencil. From this copy the instructress types the stencils, and copies are made on the duplicating machine.

Four or five pages comprise the newspaper each week, and these are stapled together by the students.
"The Third Grade News" includes
each week in addition to the picture
cover, and the picture page, poems, news, riddles, also stories made up during English class. Mention is also made from time to time of those listed on the honor roll, those showing perfection in certain tests, special projects and programs, and signs of Spring are noted as well as other seasonable subjects covered.

Rescue Woman From River

Philadelphia, April 18.—After rescuing a hysterical woman from the mudy waters of the Schuylkill River, the Harbor Police today began grappling
the mid-city Walnut street bridge in the belief a man may have fallen or leaped into the river with her.

"Where's Bobby? Is he dead?"
screamed the woman, identified as Julia Buttrick, 27, of this city, as two patrolmen hauled her to safety. She repeated the questions over and over again while physicians treated her.

The woman refused to identify "Bobby" or answer any questions put to her by police.

Farmers To Fight Naval Bill

Washington, April 18.—Faced by superior numbers, a band of senators, chiefly from the farm belt, were mapping plans today for a fight on the billion-dollar expansion bill.

Debate on the bill to restore America's sea power was scheduled to begin tomorrow when the senators reconvene.

While the "big navy" forces were happy over President Roosevelt's leadership in the pending contest to "authorize" a 20% expansion in the fleet
at a cost of possibly $1,500,000,000, speculation was rife over the amount of cash he would ask to begin construction of the vessels.

Officials said the blaze apparently centered on the south side of the third level, approximately a mile from the mine shaft. Miners familiar with battling underground fires, were sent down into the workings, but the extent of the fire was not learned immediately.

The winners of the first prizes were:

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

A Matter of Choice

Washington, April 16.
WHAT this new Roosevelt program really amounts to is an effort to give
the people again
the same sickening, syrupy
dose ladled out
to them before.
There is no real difference in the medicine, and there will be no real
difference in the effect,
except that if we take it, our last condition will be worse than our first.

TO BELIEVE anything else is to ignore experience and close the mind to facts. After a dizzy period of apparent progress, the net result of the first dose has been a dangerous dislocation of the Federal finances; the imposition of unprecedented burdens in the shape of direct and indirect taxes; the handicapping of business, with such partisan restrictive agencies

as the National Labor Relations Board, a condition of vast unemployment than when the big spending began. The one true yardstick by which this Administration should always be measured is the size and cost of the relief load. By that yardstick its failure is tragic.

IN THE face of all this, the President proposes a renewal of large-scale Federal spending, another pump-priming period, during which Federal funds are to pour forth in various unthoughtout ways and all notion of regaining control over Treasury expenditures to be completely abandoned. At the same time, while protesting his desire to help business, he opposes the tax revisions which it is overwhelmingly agreed would help most, and demands "reforms" in

BRISTOL YOUNG MAN ACCOMPANIES GATTI TO AFRICA

John J. Colgan, Roosevelt St., Signs Contract For Big Safari

MECHANICAL ENGINEER

Leaves This Morning for New York; Sails Thursday;
Trip 1 1/2 Years

A young Bristol man, bent upon adventure and education, left this morning for a journey of 1 1/2 years, during which time he will be part of a safari that will lead through the jungles of Africa.

John J. Colgan, 26, of 272 Roosevelt street, has signed a contract to accompany the Tenth Gatti African Expedition, his work on this long journey being that of a mechanical engineer.

Young Colgan, the son of Mrs. Emma Colgan, has for the past 10 years
been employed by the Dowden Engineering Company, here. When he first learned of the plans of Commader Attilio Gatti, noted Italian explorer,
to make his tenth trip to the Belgian Congo, using two deluxe trailers and a fleet of trucks of a type that he was very familiar with, he immediately communicated with the leader of the expedition. After considerable correspondence, high recommendations
from his local employers, and interviews, the Bristol man was given the opportunity to sign-up for the journey of a life-time.

After due consideration, Colgan signed the contract on Saturday, and left this morning for New York City.

A 45-day ocean trip lies ahead of the party, before the group disembarks
at Matadi, in Africa.

In the party, which will be gone for 1 1/2 years, are: Commader and Mrs.
Gatti; two Italian cameramen; two American engineers—Mr. Witskey, electrical engineer, and Mr. Colgan, mechanical engineer; four native drivers;
dozens of boys to be used as cooks, houseboys, etc.; and hundreds of porters, pygmies guides, and others.

GOURMETS ON THE MARCH

Having tasted the fruits of publicity recently when the story was spread that increasing numbers of Germans are enlisting in the French Foreign Legion, the famous regiments are following up the advantage by further calling attention to the allurements of this all-nations contingent. What with annual discharges and the attractions offered to adventurers by the civil war in Spain, there is need of 1,000 new men a year for the Regiments Etrangers, all volunteers, mind you, for there is no conscription or direct solicitation. The rank and file of the outfit go on the belief that one volunteer is worth six pressed men.

There are few Americans in the Foreign Legion, despite all that Hollywood says to the contrary, and increasingly there appears to be a dearth of other non-French nationals, who are too busy serving their own countries in these perilous times. In order to invite joiners, France has made its much publicized army unit not only a haven for the lost but the best eating house of all the armies of the world. The recruit gets a home, clothes and 600 francs in bounty money and is treated to the best in French cooking. Here are one day's menus:

Breakfast, coffee, bread and sardines. Lunch, potage julienne, roast beef and spinach, Russian salad, coffee. Dinner, soup aux vermicelles, ragout de boeuf, lentilles au jus, canennbert and coffee. And a bottle of wine a day.

The legionnaire may be a mercenary but he lives on the fat of the land.

NO PENALTY FOR PILOTS

A valiant effort has been made by America's airlines to repair the damage done to their safety records by several tragic accidents of last winter, especially in the Western mountain area. More careful precautions are now in effect and better instruments reduce the dangers of flying in bad weather.

More comforting to the air passengers will be the news that some lines have adopted a policy which lightens the pilot's load of responsibility by deferring to his flying judgment. The pilots are guaranteed their full monthly wage, without penalty for flights that are called off or interrupted because of bad weather. This should answer the complaint that undue pressure has persuaded pilots to go ahead when it would be safer to ground their planes.

With all due credit to the extraordinary advances of safety in aviation, bad weather is still a dangerous enemy of the transport plane. When in doubt of what lies ahead, the flying rule should be to play safe. Trained and experienced pilots equipped with all possible information that ground crews, weather experts and radio warnings can supply should know best whether it is safe to keep their schedules. Sole authority in such matters rests with the captain of a ship at sea and there is no less responsibility on the shoulders of the man who flies a transport plane.

It's a small world, and yet a place like Manila, where McNair is still Page 1 stuff, seems a million miles away.

It's been some time since the President put in a request for "Home on the Range." As things are going, the seats of the night are not enough.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Oct. 5, 1876. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

On Sunday last, Thomas Robinson, a lad about 11 years of age, and the son of George Robinson, of Lafayette street, was struck by a locomotive and instantly killed. He was walking on the track outside the borough limits, beyond Jefferson avenue, as the Trenton wayline, due at Bristol at 2:50, was approaching him. The engineer blew his whistle and the boy stepped aside and walked on the ties on the outside of the rail. He was not out of reach of the locomotive, however, as the butting bar of the engine struck him in the back of the head, killing him instantly. The train was stopped as quickly as possible and the body was conveyed back to Lafayette street. The remains were interred in the Episcopal burying ground yesterday.

On Friday morning last, Edward Minster's barn, in Bristol Township, was burned, together with the contents, consisting of hay, oats and wheat. The wagon house adjoining, containing the farming implements, was also burned. Nothing was saved excepting two carriages, and one set of harness, which was done by Mrs. Minster rushing into the burning building and bringing them out, notwithstanding the fire burned her hair and eyebrows.

On last Saturday night, the ten-pin alley belonging to the Bath Springs property, was fired by incendiaries. The alarm was given between 12 and one o'clock. There was a heavy rain falling, and the roads were so heavy that the building was almost burned down before the firemen reached the place. No clue has as yet been obtained as to who the incendiaries are.

At the semi-annual election of officers of Hopkins Lodge, No. 87, I. O. O. F., William Kinsey was chosen representative to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania; Joshua Burton, N. G.; Edward V. Beans, V. G.; and B. C. Foster, financial secretary.

The burgess of Bristol, Charles E.

Scott, announces that $50 reward will be paid for evidence which will result in the conviction of the party or parties who set fire to the Keystone forge building and the Bath Springs ten-pin alley.

A reception, participated in by a large number of the members of the Congregation of the Baptist Church, was given to the pastor, Rev. W. H. "onard, last Friday evening, at the parsonage.

Rev. William Hance, canal missionary, will preach to the boatmen at the basin, on Sunday afternoon, at four o'clock.

Jacob Bowman, supervisor of the lower end of Bristol township, is engaged in mending the roads.

The America Hose, Hook and Ladder Company has procured 13 rubber fire buckets.

The residents of Doylestown properly observed the 28th Pennsylvania day as a legal holiday. Some of the stores were closed, and many of them were handsomely decorated. Dr. G. Harvey, one of the most patriotic men in the town, and who is never backward in giving vent to his feeling upon such an occasion, swung to the breeze several beautiful flags.

LANGHORNE—Business is looking up in our busy little borough. To judge from the new buildings now erecting in and around here.

Blackly Bunting purchased the property of the Richardson estate on Maple avenue, at public sale on Thursday last, for $1,435.

The Philadelphia, Newtown and New York Railroad, was sold yesterday morning by M. Thomas & Sons, auctioneers, at the Philadelphia Merchants' Exchange, for $10,000, to Isaac Eyer, representing a committee of bondholders of the road, under power of attorney and agreement. The sale was made in accordance with a decree of the court of common pleas, in equity, at the June term, in the suit of the Guarantee Trust and Safe Deposit Company, mortgagee and trustee.

The Great Game of Politics

the shape of a wage-and-hour bill and other regulatory legislation, showing no change in his personal hostility and rendering meaningless the conciliatory tone of his "fireside chat."

FROM the "mild inflationists" and from the radicals who have been pushing him in this direction, and from whom the plan came, there is enthusiasm for the new program—but from no other source. On the contrary, Democratic and independent newspapers, commentators and recognized authorities generally are almost unanimous in deploring the shallow and immature economics with which the scheme is buttressed and pointing out the pregnant fact that Mr. Roosevelt has already proved the spending policy does not work; that there isn't a chance of its working now; that while increased relief expenditures are unavoidable, the way to restore private initiative is not to turn on again the Federal spigots but to stop the leaks and move toward solvency.

IT IS impossible to avoid repeating that no one has more strongly indicted his present policy than Mr. Roosevelt himself. There are a dozen speeches made when he was seeking the Presidency, in which he denounced exactly what he is now proposing. In the light of these things, his request for confidence and his effort to make it appear that those not foolish enough to swallow this unsound and unwholesome proposal are failing in their duty as citizens is absurd. It is on a par with the unctuous plea against bitterness and hate, coming from a man who has done more to stir up class feeling and promote hate than any other President we have had—and whose name calling of his critics and opponents has been unprecedented.

THE fact that this spending program is launched just ahead of a political campaign in which he has a vital stake, and that more money for relief and public works in their districts is an almost irresistible temptation to members of Congress, who, in a few months, must come up for re-election and reelection—these facts, coupled with his own recorded views, lend some to question Mr. Roosevelt's sincerity. It is true, there is a strong political flavor about the whole messy idea, but it isn't necessary to question his sincerity. However, it does seem to come down to this: If he is sincere, then he certainly isn't wise; if he is wise, he can't be sincere. It's a matter of choice.

be other costs which the borough cannot afford.

It was claimed by the supporters of the zoning measure that a meeting was held and 60 people signed a petition in favor of it. Dr. H. W. Turner, appearing against the proposal, said that opponents of the measures were also citizens and that they should be heard.

Twenty-five members of the women's home and foreign missionary and ladies' aid society of the Langhorne M. E. Church were entertained at the home of Mrs. Frank W. Linton, 3212 Stanwood street, Holmesburg.

The morning devotions were conducted by Mrs. Ida M. Heritage and Mrs. Edward D. Osterhout had charge of the devotions in the afternoon.

Mrs. George B. Thompson had charge of the morning and afternoon study.

A Lenten offering was received at this meeting.

The following hostesses served a luncheon: Mrs. Linton, Mrs. Lynda Bryant, Mrs. Augustus Bilger, Mrs. Rufus N. VanSant and Mrs. Harry Williams, Jr.

The next meeting will be held on May 10, at the home of Mrs. Edward D. Osterhout, here.

AUTO KILLS HORSE

ST. LOUIS.—(INS)—An automobile driven by Joseph Ducker, 32, collided with a horse which was rambling at large, killing the horse and wrecking Ducker's automobile. The horse, valued at $75, was owned by William Bullerick, who told police the animal escaped from a barn.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1938

King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD—Got any ideas for new cycles of movies? Hollywood is staying up nights trying to think of one. The crazy comedies are about washed up, musicals are not so hot, jungle locales are thoroughly exploited, the old south is being taken care of in "Jezebel" and "The Toy Wife" (not to mention "Gone With the Wind").

Everybody is making prison pictures now. "Over the Wall" and "C O n d e m n e d W o m e n" are current releases. George Raft's new picture, "You and Me" deals with the parole problem.

George Raft

Paramount is starting "Prison Farm" and "Escape From Leavenworth" at a future date. Mervyn Le Roy will have a prison angle in his M. G. M. picture, "Ten Days of Heaven."

Maybe Paramount will touch off a new series of air pictures with "Men With Wings". There is so much talk now of airplanes in war. Or the key to the new cycle may be in the fact that M. G. M. is rushing "Northwest Passage" and Paramount is planning to beat them to the gun with "Spawn of the North".

If you could really call the turn, you'd be rich.

Smiley Burdette, the comedian in the Gene Autry pictures, is off for a month of personal appearances, and what will this do to his tour with Autry? They were supposed to start for South America. With Autry getting $4,000 a week for his share, Gene said that the tour is postponed for two weeks.

The opening of Director William Keighley's gas station was the most fantastic of all. He had lights, a band, entertainers, the personal appearance of stars, a radio hookup and even a free barbecue.

Reginald Denny's miniature planes, originally designed as toys, are capable of carrying a high power bomb and of releasing it by radio remote control.

Rumor says that M. G. M. will make it up to Hedy Lamarr for her long wait by giving her the Garbo role in a remake of "Flesh and the Devil". With Robert Taylor in the Gilbert part.

Alan Hale has invested $200,000 in the inventions you are always hearing about. His wife says: "Never mind about making money on them, just get back what you have put in". Hale may do it next year on the theater chair, which already has sold to the tune of $85,000.

Hale is one of the dozens of Hollywood celebrities who never make a move without consulting an astrologer. William Dieterle, director of "Zola" is another. He insisted on starting his Wanger picture at 11:15 in the morning. Because the stars said the time was favorable.

Here's good news for the William Powell fans. Bill was well enough to pay a surprise call the other day on Myrna Loy. The movie sneaked him into the house and Myrna found him sitting in the living room with a bouquet of flowers in each hand. Picked them from her own garden.

The big showdown between Paulette Goddard and Charlie Chaplin is supposed to take place soon. She is back on the coast. Moreover, she is due to report to Selznick for tests and fittings on "The Young in Heart". . . . Lots of the stars are now putting "escalator clauses" into their annuity contracts. Madge Evans has one. It provides that in time of depression, devaluation of the dollar, etc., she is to receive an increased allowance. . . . In the six months that he has been off the screen, Joel McCrea has turned down three pictures, which would have netted him $100,000. . . . David Niven won the season's trophy for exhibiting the best skiing form at Sun Valley. If you care, Robert Taylor goes riding minus his shirt in the northridge estates. . . . Jane Bryan, the starlet, and Phil Kellogg, Warner cutter and scion of the corn flakes tribe, have promised their families they won't marry for a year. . . . And Samuel Goldwyn, or so the story goes, walked onto the lot the day after he had fired a lot of his staff. "That's gratitude," he said. "Look, they've all done their best."

"Love I Dare Not" by ALLENE CORLISS

CHAPTER XXIII

Gina said, "I wish you both all sorts of luck, darling."

"I know you do," Alec leaned forward and rumbled her short curling hair lightly. It was an old habit and an endearing one. He had always liked to touch her hair. Once it had given him exquisite delight. Now she knew it was merely an affectionate and quite unconsidered gesture. It meant little or nothing to Alec, but it was the sort of thing that made being alone with him for any length of time dangerous to this newly acquired invulnerability for which she had worked so hard.

She said, "You really have to run along, Alec. I'm dining with Barry and I have to change."

"But I don't want to go. I want to talk with you."

"But you've already told me everything you've said and everything Sam said."

"Not about the play. About you. Are you going to Paris in June?"

"I don't know. I haven't given Barry a definite answer yet."

But that night she gave him one. That night, dining with him at one of the smarter dinner spots where he was taking her fairly regularly this spring, she told him she would go.

She said, "You're right, Barry. . . I'll be better off in Paris than I am in New York. For the moment, New York seems to be very bad for me."

Neither of them mentioned why it was bad for her. Neither of them mentioned Alec. But Barry thought, "She wants to get away before this business between Alec and Caroline comes to a head. . . . she doesn't want to be here then."

And she might not have been, if an unforeseen heat wave had not sent everyone scurrying out of town and closed Caroline's play two weeks early, so that for the first time in months Caroline found herself with time on her hands and more money than she knew what to do with. . . . money to buy clothes and a small car and rent a cottage at the shore. Time to play, to go to the theatre, to dance, to swim, to lie for hours in the sun. Time, at last, to stop for a little and think about herself and her life and Alec. . . .

She no longer, in this spring of 1936, thought about Tommy Gale at all.

The cottage at the shore was Alec's idea.

He said, "I know the exact place for you. It's in Connecticut, there's a delightful flower garden, a nice little private beach and an efficient couple that goes with the house. If Gina is too busy to leave town, I'll get Rose to go along with you."

When Alec and Caroline drove out the next morning to look the place over and sign the lease, she was enthusiastic but apprehensive.

"It looks like such an establishment, Alec," she said. "Two servants and a whole house. . . it's so much money. . . ."

She had not yet grown used to the fact that she was potentially a money maker. Alec said to her now, "You are already making two hundred dollars a week. You will make much less this summer, but by fall, you will be making twice that again. There is no reason, really, why you should not have this place if you like it."

"I like it, but I will have only two months here and then I have to go to Baltimore. . . ."

Alec said, "I've thought of that and I've arranged to sublet it for you for the rest of the summer."

So Caroline signed the lease and three days later moved out. Gina, getting ready to spend a summer in Europe, was too busy to leave town. Or at least she said she was, and Caroline never for a moment suspected that she might have other reasons for not wanting to go. So in the end, it was Rose Martell who went along. Her dyed hair and absurd summer furs and trailing lace dinner dresses looked incongruous and ridiculous in the charming, small Connecticut house with its subdued chintzes and early American pine, but Caroline was used to her, fond of her, and preferred to have her rather than anyone else she knew.

After the first week, which was hectic with many trips into town after country clothes and additional silver, linen and china for the house, the days fell into a sort of pleasant routine. Caroline slept late, had a short swim before breakfast and a long one before lunch. Afternoons she read, sun-bathed, occasionally drove into town to a matinee that she had missed during the winter because she was working herself. Evenings she invariably spent with Alec. Sometimes in town. More often in the country, where they danced to the radio, talked shop or, later in the month, drove about to houses in the neighborhood where people they both knew, but more particularly Alec, were gradually moving out for the summer.

Sometimes sitting on a terrace or in a long, candlelit living-room, its windows flung open to the night and the water. Caroline thought that she had come a long way from the girl who had left Portland, Maine, such a short time before. She knew and was accepted by these people—friends of Alec's mostly, although some of them she knew by now fairly well. Amusing, clever, hard-living, hard-working people for the most part, who were used to sudden successes. Who seemed to find nothing surprising in the fact that last summer she had not been one of them and that this summer she was. She listened to them talk and watched them drink and drank a little herself. A very little because she did not like the taste of hard liquor and, besides, the only effect it had on her was to make her sleepy and dull. So for the most part she found herself looking on, and she discovered that among all these people there was no one quite so good-looking, or amusing, or charming as Alec.

Besides him the other men seemed unbelievably dull and uninteresting. Now that she had time to be with him and was not tired and driven by her work, she realized that it would be very easy to let herself go. . . . to fall a little in love with him.

One night, looking at him across a roomful of people, she realized with a little shock that he had not made love to her for a long while. She thought, "Perhaps that was something that lasted just a little while last winter. . . perhaps he has forgotten that once he asked me if I could ever learn to love him. . . if, given time, I could some day marry him. . . ."

But Alec had not forgotten. He had merely been wise. He had waited, as he had told Gina he intended to, until such time as Caroline was free to put her mind on him.

She was free now, had been for some weeks. He did not intend to wait much longer.

In the meantime, he read THE APPLE ORCHARD to her, told her his plans for her in connection with it. At first she was inarticulate with surprise. Then she was touched and fearful. Touched that he should believe in her enough to risk so much, apprehensive that she might fail him.

She asked, "But have I had enough experience and am I a good enough actress to carry this part, Alec?"

"You have not had enough experience, perhaps, but you are a good enough actress. . . and by fall you will have had more experience. It might be wiser to wait another year, but I am not wise where you are concerned, darling. . . because you see, I am so much in love with you. . . ."

She was a little surprised to find that suddenly she was trembling. She stood up and Alec took her hand and together they started to walk toward the beach in the moonlight.

"It's been a long time since you have mentioned it, Alec," she said.

"I've wondered sometimes recently if you still were. . . ."

"Well," said Alec, and his fingers crushed hard against hers. "Now you know that I am. If I have been silent for so long, if I have not made any attempt even to kiss you, it has been because I was determined not to hurry you. Not to rush you into something you weren't sure about. I still don't want to hurry you, darling, but I think that I have to kiss you. . . at least once. . . ."

He kissed her with the moonlight sliding over them. It was then, with Alec's arms around her, with his lips pressed against hers, that she thought of Tommy Gale.

Tommy had said, "You're all set with Alec. He's mad about you and he's a swell guy and worth two of me any day. . . ."

It had been snowing hard. There had been snow on his shoulders and on the brim of his hat. And later they had kissed with the snow drifting soft against both their faces. . . and then he had said, "There is something about a girl and a snow-storm. . . forgive it, please. . . ."

And presently he had left her and the few times they had met since then he had been careful to let her see how casual it had all been and how quickly forgotten. . . .

She thought, "I shall think of him now, just this once, and I shall never think of him again. All the rest of my life I shall think of Alec. . . ."

Alec stopped kissing her and held her a little away from him so he could see her face clearly in the moonlight. "Oh, my dearest, you do love me a little, don't you?"

And Caroline said, trying desperately to put Tommy Gale and that drifting snowstorm and all the sweet, mad ecstasy of that foolish kiss out of her heart, "Yes, Alec, I do. I even love you enough to marry you if that is what you will want. . . ."

Long afterward, when she found that she was wrong about this, that she didn't love him enough for that, it was consoling to her to know that at least in that moment of saying it she believed that she did. That in that moment she sincerely believed that she was being utterly honest with him and with herself.

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

"Non Stop New York," which opens at the Bristol Theatre today, is Gaumont's much-heralded and prophetic picture of transatlantic passenger service and we are bound to say that it lives up to its promise and its high preview praise. It is fast-moving and suspenseful; the reproduction of the oceanic plane of the future is entirely convincing, the direction is perfect, and the acting on a high plane throughout.

SCHOOL BASEBALL LEAGUE TO OPEN IN BUCKS COUNTY TOMORROW WITH TEAMS EAGER TO GET INTO ACTION

By Louis Tomlinson

Today the sport loving public will witness the opening of the Big League baseball campaign. While the major portion of baseball fans in this section is looking forward with anxiety for the ushering in of the 1938 major league openings, the followers of the scholastic ranks as well as coaches and players are also anxiously awaiting the pitch which sends the schoolboys and girls off to drive toward the title in their respective leagues tomorrow.

All four of the "Bucco" leagues will launch their campaigns this week with the official 1st lifting scheduled for tomorrow when 12 of the 16 teams in three loops start from scratch toward the pennant. The other circuit is the Lower Bucks County league for girls, which does not open until Thursday of this week. In each loop, the winner will not, in all probability, be decided until the final week or so—five or six weeks from now.

Four of the five teams in the lower division of the Lower Bucks County circuit, four of the five in the Junior High loop, and four of the six in the upper section of the "Bucco" league are carded for tilts on opening day. In the girls' league, six of the seven teams will play on Thursday afternoon.

SCHEDULES FOR THE WEEK
Tuesday, April 19
Lower Bucks Division—Newtown at Langhorne, Bristol at Bensalem, Upper Bucks Division—Buckingham at Fallsington, New Hope at Richboro, Junior High—Trevose at Bristol, Croydon at Edgely.

Thursday, April 21
Softball League—New Hope at Bucks, Bensalem at Langhorne, Newtown at Southampton.

Friday, April 22
Lower Bucks Division—Langhorne at Morrisville, Newtown at Bristol.

Upper Bucks Division—Fallsington at Yardley, New Hope at Southampton, Richboro at Buckingham.

Junior High—Edgely at Trevose. Coach Steve Jungers' Cardinal and Gray outfit are guests of George Reimer's Bensalem Owls at the Cornwells school field where they launch their drive to defend the honors won by them last year. Out at Langhorne, the warwhoops will ring again as the Newtown Indians march into town to clash with coach Charles Beck's Redskins. That is the setup for the opening day in the lower division of the Bucco League with Morrisville High being the only idle team, but they hop off on Friday against Langhorne at Morrisville.

Southampton and Yardley got the jump over the rest of the club's in the upper division of the Lower Bucks County loop when they pushed ahead their scheduled tilt for tomorrow and played it off last Thursday. The net result was that Southampton took the league lead and Yardley found themselves in the basement once more as the outcome of a 16-2 lacing the latter took Buckingham's burly Buccaneers coached by Dick Hassler will battle the Fallsington Falcons on the Falls field, and New Hope high last year's champions of their loop will launch their defense against Richboro on the latter's field.

The third league to open its campaign tomorrow is the infant Junior High circuit, which was born last year, with the first title being won by Bristol High. This loop schedules the defending title holders to match skill and wits with coach Lloyd Sleguist's Trevose club on the local high school field. The other contest pits Henry Morgan's Croydon outfit against Walt Miller's Edgely nine at Edgely. Bensalem, the fifth team in the league, inaugurates its league season against Croydon away on Thursday afternoon.

of the vicinity but no trace of the fugitive was found.

The Penna. Motor Police from the Oxford Valley barracks and Detective Russo have been stopping hundreds of cars each night. The licensees are checked and the drivers questioned. It is part of the campaign to keep crime down in this particular vicinity.

A car belonging to Mary Smoyer, 819 Pond street, reported stolen yesterday to the Penna. Motor Police, was reported found today near the Kings Farm. The car was said to have been considerably damaged.

Hitler Will Be Guarded By 100,000 Fascist Troops

Fuehrer will follow from the Pass down to Rome and Naples and Capri. Every bridge and culvert, possible lurking places for bombmen, is being inspected and in ample time will have necessary guards. It is estimated that at least 100,000 troops will be deployed for guard duty, distributed virtually every 50 yards along both sides of the railroad lines, in addition to regular secret service and other police.

A nationwide roundup has been under way for some time to snare all known or suspected agitators, and these persons are already either in jail or under very strict surveillance.

It is reliably reported that all Jews will be asked to absent themselves from Florence, Rome, Naples and Capri while Hitler remains in those places.

German consulates throughout Italy have issued orders to German-Jews to register their names and addresses and to advise the authorities where they will be during the ceremonies.

More than 200 Nazi police arrived in Rome recently and have been assigned to regular police duty in the districts which Hitler will visit to acquaint themselves with Italian police methods and to become thoroughly familiar with the geography of the city. Similar units are at work in Naples and Florence.

To augment the number of troops available for the reviews without weakening garrisons and to aid in the heavy police duties entailed in the six or seven day celebrations, reserves of three classes have been called in the three cities Hitler will visit.

Police reserves of virtually every class also have been called out, including Carabinieri, Fascist Militia, and Metropolitan police. It is estimated that about 40,000 men are involved in this general recall.

Cost of this extra police and military service will be defrayed by the 400 million lire fund which the government has appropriated to be spent in refurbishing Naples, Florence and Rome for the event.

A careful checkup is being made also of all foreigners in Italy, including residents of long standing. These are required to give their full names, parentage, addresses of origin and residence in Italy and date of arrival. This such information already is or should be being done despite the fact that all be in the files of the police.

Tracing of Jewish antecedents is apparently the chief reason for this nationwide "inquiry."

white sweet peas. She wore white satin slippers and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and sweet peas.

The maid of honor was attractive in a gown of white lace over white satin, fashioned with a lace bolero with short puffed sleeves and high neckline. The skirt was cut long and full and the front of the dress was trimmed with pink and blue grosgrain ribbon bows. A tiarra of pink flowers, tulle face veil and satin slippers completed her outfit, and she carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were gowned alike in chiffon dresses, in different color. The bodies were cut with the V-shape neckline, and fastened at the neckline with a clip. The sleeves were short and puffed, and the long skirts flared at the bottom. Embroidered designs trimmed the waistlines. Each attendant wore satin slippers, and a tulle tiarra with face veil the tone of her dress. Miss McVaine wore maize tone and carried yellow roses; Mrs. Lawler, aqua, carrying pink roses; Miss Hettie, powder blue, with pink roses; and Miss Muldoon, ashes of roses tone, carrying roses to match her gown.

A wedding breakfast was served to the bridal party and immediate families at McAllister's, Philadelphia. The couple will leave today for Lake Walespaupack, for ten days. The bride travelled in a gray herring-bone three piece suit with luggage-tan accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. McVaine will make their home in Hazelton, where Mr. McVaine is employed by the state constabulary.

The bride is a graduate of Hallahan Catholic Girls' high school, and prior to her marriage, was employed by Dunn & Bradstreet, Philadelphia. Mr. McVaine graduated from Boys' Catholic high school, Philadelphia.

way," of the American-West African Line, as will also the International trucks. Thirty days will be spent on the water, and 15 days in various ports before Matadi is reached. From that port the party will continue to Leopoldville, capital of the Belgian Congo.

Then, after the safari is organized, thousands of miles will be spent traversing all parts of Congo, the group embarking at Matadi on July 27th, 1939, for the return home, arriving in New York on September 15th, 1939.

Young Colgan has never been upon the ocean, and looks forward with great pleasure and high hopes to both the ocean crossing, and the many thrills, the hard work, and the knowledge that will come with the long journey in Africa. He attended Bristol public schools, completing grammar school work here, and sees in the trip a splendid chance to further his education and knowledge. He has driven more than 300,000 miles, and feels thoroughly familiar with the operation and mechanism of the type of trucks he will be in charge of.

Throughout last week, Mr. Colgan was located in New York, where the trailers were on display. One night was known as "Good Housekeeping Night" with invitations being issued by that magazine for many to view the trailers. The truck manufacturers also had a special night for their display, and on a third evening Commander and Mrs. Gatti had a private showing for a party of friends. On each evening banquets were features. Young women, garbed in attractive costumes such as Mrs. Gatti wears in the African jungle, showed visitors the trailers, and explained details of the complete equipment.

Commander Gatti, who has spent 13 years in African exploration, has large anthropological, ethnographical, zoological and palaeontological collections represented in various museums, chiefly in the Royal University of Florence, Italy.

The purposes of the expedition are: To complete discovery of "mulaha" believed to be an unknown fifth anthropoid; to capture some live specimens of very rare and little known animals never before brought into captivity; to make a complete survey, gather materials, study itineraries, for proposed opening of the Belgian Congo to the tourist traffic, by fleets of ultra-modern trailers; to make for one of the leading movie companies a series of 13 shorts on the most unusual aspects of Central Africa; and to gather material for books.

Comparing the Circuits

By BURNLEY

Some of the critics have been taking pot-shots at the National League this spring, calling it a minor league, among other things.

Of course, the American loop has garnered most of the glory in the last few years, holding a big edge in the all-star games and in recent world series. Such comparisons are not flung by an means.

All star games are strictly exhibitions and really prove nothing as to the comparative merits of the two circuits.

The same can be said of the world series, though these classics are supposed to decide the world's championship. In a four-out-of-seven series, a last place team like the Browns might whip the mighty Yanks. Luck plays a major part in such short and inconclusive tests.

It is undeniably true that the two leagues differ in their styles of play. The junior loop has featured a powerful attack ever since the start of the Ruthian era. American League teams play for a cluster of runs, scorning the sacrifice, hit-and-run style of play.

On the other hand, the senior organization sticks to old style defensive tactics, playing for one run at a time as they did in the days of Marty Mordecai Brown and Alexander.

The free-swinging, slugging games in the American outfit probably have a wider appeal, but there are still plenty of fans who prefer the tight pitchers' battles.

One of the main factors accounting for the notion of American League supremacy is the unchallenged reign of the Yankees. Rule out the Yanks, say National League fans, and the Frick loop shapes up as strong or stronger than the American circuit.
